CLS director Sheila Contreras was invited to present her paper “Uniquely Native, Enduringly Foreign: Métis and Chican@ Narrative in the Americas” in April at the University of California at Berkeley at the From Coalitions to Comparativism II: Chicano/Latino and Native American Studies Now conference. This half-day conference brought together four scholars working at the cutting edge of their fields to talk about the transdisciplinary and transcultural possibilities for Chicana/Latina and Native American Studies.

The Julian Samora Research Institute will host the conference “Latinos 2050: Restoring the Public Good” October 30- November 1. Keynote speakers will be Michael Olivas from the University of Houston, and José Angel Gutiérrez from the University of Texas at Arlington.
